

“What do you know about GEE?”

My interpretation of GEE are:

■ Global - Enterprise - Experience

The first time I heard about the name of this international business competition, my curiosity was swiftly aroused as it was highly recommended by my institute instructor. It was not an obligation for participation, but absolutely should be a fabulous chance to practice and reinforce my commerce and management knowledge. I knew I had to go for this experience!

■ Globalization - Enthusiasm - Expectancy

I had never been joining in any contest which required collaboration with students from different countries. The more I came to know about the GEE competition, the more enthusiastic I became. As I was so eager to see what kind of experience I might have attained upon participation and impacts of globalization towards the academic field. This certainly appealed to be a sounding learning process.

■ Gathering - Emails - Excitement

After enrolment, the contest commenced shortly. Eight persons resided in various places and of different contexts now had to overcome all existing barriers like time difference, culture variation and individual workload, and work together closely in three weeks for generating an effective business proposal. Thanks to the advance technology that everyone could gather and meet one another intangibly. But I also realise we should not take everything for granted, as there may be possibility that machines are failed to function, like at the beginning, the internet access problem had prohibited our connection with the Nigerian teammates. The problem seems still exiting. This really made the competition more exciting.

■ Goal - Encouragement - Enhancement

Time was short. The team had to be decisive and shaped our proposal goal. We made clear our direction. Members supported and encouraged one other. Conversation was short but open-minded, I found our understanding towards each other enhanced the trust and mutual friendship.

■ Genuineness - Exposure - Expertise

I am pleased to have made friends with members from the sounding marketing background and who are experienced in the business and management fields as well. It was the right moment for us to apply all theories that had learnt into a genuine scenario. I appreciate other people's skill and capabilities and discovered what is the quality of being a leader in the group or in a corporate.

■ Groupwork - Efficiency - Equilibrium

What a good time to show our potential talents and abilities to be a united group of practical business and management expertise. We were not just competing with other groups, but with time as well! We had to be effective in action, reached consensus and maintained equilibrium in our life, so as to develop a report with the maximum quality and minimum uncertainty.

■ Game - Endeavour - Enlightenment

It was like a game, an interesting and exciting one. Every participant played hard and seriously. Throughout the process, my team strove our best and gained many new ideas about the business and countries' special culture.

■ Growth - Exploration - Esteem

The GEE competition is really a provoking and inspiring activity. Within these three weeks, I could explore my interest and ability. My esteem was very much satisfied as I had made friends, good memory, and new knowledge.

■ Gratitude - Enrichment - Excellence

Finally, a heartfelt thank to the organizers and every participants. Without everyone's effort and contribution, Global Enterprise Experience competition could never be happened. Sincerely I believe throughout the activity, more and more business talents will be discovered. Global Enterprise Experience is the right starting point for the future success.
